Very Briefly:

Gawker has written many (easily-proven-)FALSE articles about me over the years (because I was a whistleblowing reporter for NYC papers, exposing their numerous crimes and false reports), and I was planning on suing them for arguably the most flawless Lbel case in US history... but then I read your court is FINALIZING their obligations in Bankruptcy court!

YIKES!

DOES THIS MEAN they will be protected from any future torts?

If YES... is there any way I can make my case in your court?

(It's not a very big case. A jury wouldn't give me more than $200k at best. $50k at the least. It was only a few articles with bold lies... and my damages are easy to verify, but Gawker are the least-worst offenders to write lies about me [that's one of the few perks of being a whistleblower: endless false stories about you in the press!].... ergo, smaller fish.)

(Heck... Hulk-gate isn't in Gawker's Top 5000 crimes!)

(Note: it is demonstrably false that "all press is good press". [Ask Cosby!] My life is over, basically, until I can scrub the internet of the serious lies about me. And even that wouldn't work completely, as I'm a semi-public figure.)

I'm praying you can help as I don't have the resources to hire / find attys to sue at this time (and, 'ironically', the attys I've chatted with won't help b/c they have heard all terrible rumours about me by Gawker and friends!!)
